

The Salon Art + Design poised for seventh edition in New York

Dezeen promotion: this year's The Salon Art + Design fair in New York City will take place 8-12 November 2018, and Dezeen readers can receive a discounted rate on day passes.

The seventh edition of the annual fair, organised by Sanford Smith + Associates, will return to the Park Avenue Armory on Manhattan's Upper East Side next month.

Fifty-six galleries from 11 countries will showcase collectible art and design pieces, ranging from vintage to contemporary items across furniture, lighting, glass and ceramics, as well as decorative and fine art.

"The seventh edition of The Salon continues to exceed expectations with galleries participating from all around the globe, continuing to push the boundaries between furniture, design, architecture and decorative art enhanced by blue-chip modern art," said executive director Jill Bokor.

New galleries this year will include Heller Gallery and The Future Perfect, both from New York.

Highlights put forward by The Salon team include an exhibit of new works by Misha Kahn and Jonathan Trayte, presented by Friedman Benda.

Reinier Bosch's bench that appears to be melting (main image), presented by Priveekollektie Contemporary Art and Design; ceramics by Hitomi Hosono; and crafted furniture by late Italian architect Gio Ponti will also be among not-to-miss items.

The offering of vintage wares will span all of the major 20th-century movements, from art nouveau and art deco, through mid-century modern to the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s.

Examples like a 1931 adjustable lamp designed by Poul Henningsen for Louis Poulsen and a set of home products by Viennese Secessionist designer Kalomon Moser will feature.

"Our unparalleled exhibitors will bring the broadest range of material seen in any fair," said Bokor.
