Whether you're a keen collector of 20th century and contemporary design, or just want a snoop at some of the most beautiful, iconic (and occasionally downright bonkers) furniture and art pieces around, then PAD London is the place to go. Bringing together an impressive number of prominent galleries from around the world in a marquee erected around the trees in the centre of Berkeley Square, this boutique fair is designed to inspire collectors, design practitioners and the public alike.

This year 21 new participants (among them Galleria'O, Galerie Kreo, Galerie BSL, Galerie Gosserez and Galerie Italienne) will make a total of 60 exhibitors from 12 countries. It's also set to be the strongest year yet for tribal art with the added participation of Bernard Dulon, whose collection of African art has attracted the attention of renowned institutions and museums worldwide.

2013 HIGHLIGHT

An innovative design installation of MwangaBora solar lamps conceived by fashion designer Reed Krakoff is set to be one highlight at PAD this year. Created by Kenyan engineer Evans Wadongo – named a CNN Hero in 2010 – the lamps will feature at the entrance of the fair and be sold to benefit Wadongo's organization Sustainable Development for All Kenya (S DFA-Kenya).

NEED TO KNOW

Watch out for London-based exhibitors Gallery Fumi and the Carpenters Workshop Gallery (both worth a visit in their own right). At the fair Gallery Fumi will show the astonishing Engineering Temporality Cabinet by newcomer Studio Markunpoika. Carpenters Workshop Gallery will be exhibiting a collection of furniture by Rick Owens.

GETTING THERE

This is really not an issue if you're wise enough to stay at the Connaught, which not only houses its own amazing art collection from Julian Opie to Damien Hirst (don't miss the Tadao Ando water feature outside either) but is also only two minutes away by foot.
