

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 2008

Happy Halloween!

DESIGN THERAPY

A good friend of ours recently told us about Joris Laarman's new Bone Chair and we couldn't think of a more appropriate product to feature on this, one of our favorite holidays, HALLOWEEN!!! Created in a limited edition of 12 and exhibited by New York gallery Friedman Benda, this skeletal armchair is molded from a mixture of marble and porcelain mixed with resin. Developed initially on a computer, Laarman relied on software created by car manufacturer GM to create this delicately sculptural object and we think it is frightfully beautiful. In fact, this is one supernatural trick we wouldn't mind being treated to. Hope you have a safe and Happy Halloween! (Click here for a few more "tricks" and some truly terrifying "obscene interiors".)